The pharmaceutical industry needs to move "beyond the pill" in order to address future health needs and the demands to justify reimbursement, and takes the potential and value of packaging technology well beyond its current boundaries.

To allow participants to explore some of these possibilities and address the inevitable trade-offs they bring, Cambridge Consultants will facilitate an interactive workshop around designing digital health solutions based on packaging technology. Teams of participants will consider some of potential market needs that can be addressed by packaging-enabled services, generate some concepts and look at potential trade-offs in their forward development.
